

EMEA

WHAT CANDIDATES WANT

Key Findings from the Inside the Candidate Experience 2023 Report

1 in 10 candidates in EMEA would rate their recent recruitment experience as excellent. Candidates in this region are half as likely to rate their experience as excellent than those in other parts of the world.

2/3 of candidates use social media to research companies during their job search. Yet, a third of employers are not posting career related content to their social channels at least once a week.

35%

feature real employees on their career site.

35% of organisations don't

Word of mouth is still an important source for job seekers with 1 in 3 candidates in EMEA saying they've asked friends and colleagues about an employer.

Yet, they're the top three considerations for applicants when deciding to apply.

opportunity to speak to a recruiter or current employee before applying. 30%

Only 30% of employers

clearly stated that

adjustments were available

for candidates with disabilities prior to starting an application.

interest or to sign up for job alerts.

candidates to register their candidates explaining what they should expect during the application process.

taking advantage of a one-click provided information to process after applying.

44% of organisations did not provide an opportunity for candidates to give feedback on their experience.

the recruitment process.

For more global candidate experience insights, download our latest research report, Inside the Candidate Experience 2023 Report.